

Special District Election Date Study: A Crazy Quilt

Office of Nassau County Executive
Thomas R. Suozzi

7-23-2007

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

For the “Special District Election Date Study: A Crazy Quilt,” Nassau County gathered election information for the sanitary, water and library districts operating within the borders of the County. The study, conducted as a part of Nassau County Executive Thomas R. Suozzi’s initiative to research potential benefits of government consolidation, revealed that there is, on average, one special district election every 10.9 business days.

The County attempted to contact a total of 71 special districts: 11 sanitary districts, 18 water districts and 42 library districts. Of those, the County gathered the exact election dates of 63, learned the month in which the election is held for an additional 5, and was unable to reach 3. Three sanitary districts – District 14 in Hempstead, Glenwood and Syosset – neither answered their phones nor returned messages over a two-week period, even though each of these districts was called on multiple days at different times. Five water districts – Jericho, Plainview, Port Washington, West Hempstead-Hempstead Gardens and Westbury – claimed they hadn’t yet set their election dates. And one library district, Freeport Memorial, also hadn’t yet set its date.

The study revealed that special district elections are held on at least 24 different days and that there is at least one special district election in 11 of the 12 months of the year.

Furthermore, not a single special district election is held on Election Day, November 2, when voter turnout is typically highest. In fact, according to a 2005 report by Nassau County Comptroller Howard Weitzman, voter turnout at special district elections has been alarmingly low; it was 3% or less in four 2002 sanitary district elections.

The following report contains election information about all 71 sanitary, water and library districts that were contacted. This information was gathered from various sources, including direct contact with the special districts and through municipal and special district websites.

When the County contacted districts and asked for information, such as the district's election date and address, the responses of the districts varied. Some gave out this information readily, while others – including Carle Place Sanitary District and West Hempstead-Hempstead Gardens Water District – were not as cooperative.

The scattered nature of the special district elections, and the extreme difficulty involved in obtaining some of their election dates, place an undue burden on voters. Even the most conscientious of Nassau residents would find it difficult to vote in all of the elections that concern them.

Note: Additionally, there were two other commission-run taxing water districts for which the County could find no contact or any other information. These additional taxing water districts are Bethpage & Extension and Garden City South – Cathedral Gardens. The County learned of their existence through various official listings, but was unable to find any other information about them.
